

CHINESE FAIRY TALE

Scarecrow Guarding Melons

CHINESE FAIRY TALE

Scarecrow Guarding Melons

*Written by Lin Songying
Illustrated by Wang Tiecheng*

DOLPHIN BOOKS BEIJING

First Edition 1988

Hard Cover: ISBN 0-8351-1978-5 ISBN 7-80051-057-3
Paperback: ISBN 0-8351-1979-3 ISBN 7-80051-058-1

Copyright 1988 by Dolphin Books

Published by Dolphin Books

24 Baiwanzhuang Road, Beijing, China

Distributed by China International Book Trading Corporation
(Guoji Shudian), P.O. Box 399, Beijing, China

Printed in the People's Republic of China

With a hat on his head and a fan in his hand, a scarecrow is standing in the melon field.

When there is a breeze blowing,
the scarecrow drives sparrows
away with his fan.

A rabbit comes stealthily, trying to eat the melons. But she is scared away when the scarecrow keeps waving his fan.

The grandfather sun is setting. He asks the scarecrow, "Why don't you go back home?" "I am guarding the melon field," the scarecrow replies.

The grandmother moon comes out. She asks the scarecrow, “Why don’t you
sleep?” “I am watching over the melons,” he replies.

Fireflies fly over to the scarecrow and say: "Brother, let's play games together."
The scarecrow waves his hand.

Soon a toad jumps up to the scarecrow and says, "Brother, let's catch bugs." The scarecrow waves his hand again.

Under the moonlight, a hedgehog sneaks out of his cave to steal a melon.

Hearing the sound, the scarecrow hurriedly raises his fan and waves it, making the sound whoosh, whoosh ...

The hedgehog looks up and sees a person wearing a straw hat. He is frightened.

The scarecrow waves his fan harder. The hedgehog trembles with fear. The melon falls to the ground. He runs away from the melon field.

When the grandmother moon sees this, she says admiringly, "The scarecrow is very hard at watching over the melons."

Tired, the scarecrow drops his fan onto the ground and falls into a sound sleep.

In the morning, the sun is out and the scarecrow wakes up at cockcrow.

An old man who owns the melons comes to the field. He picks up the fan and puts it into the scarecrow's hand again.

The wind blows gently and the scarecrow waves the fan, making the sound whoosh, whoosh ...

The scarecrow is singing songs happily.

The old man praises the scarecrow. "You are very good at guarding melons. Since you have been here not one melon has been lost."

中国童话
稻草人看瓜
林颂英 文
王铁城 画

•
海豚出版社出版
(中国北京百万庄路24号)
人教印刷厂印刷
中国国际图书贸易总公司
(中国国际书店) 发行
北京339信箱
1988年(20开)第一版

(英)
ISBN 7-80051-057-3/J100
00310(精)
ISBN 7-80051-058-1/J101
00175(平)
88-E-370